Detaille Island, Antarctica

February 28

While we were crossing the Antarctic Circle, we were drinking to celebrate the day. Each year, only 300 visitors come this far south. Mark explained that the ice is blue down here because it catches all the colors of the rainbow except for blue. I have always thought of Antarctica as nothing but white. But now I see a clear blue light shining through the mountains of ice all around us, and I have no words to describe the beauty.

Our ship passed a huge field of frozen sea. Mark invited us to come out and play. We weren't sure at first, but when we felt how solid it was, we jumped and ran. All around us were mountains and glaciers that no one has ever explored. It amazed me to think that no human hand or foot has ever touched them; only a few human eyes have seen them.

When I get home, it will be hard for me to explain what the feeling of amazement was like, but I will try.

We all felt sad today when we realized that our ship was heading north. We really don't want to leave Antarctica --a unique world.
